

THE NORTH STAR

1,000 active keg refillers by year three, across the Gold Coast, Brisbane and Northern Rivers, residential and commercial, with 250 at six months (March 2027). Every decision gets tested against whether it moves that number.

The shape decision underneath it: settled in principle on 18 September. The taproom is an events and local business venue, not a walk-in bar. Justin's own words: Oktoberfest is a sugar hit, and he would take week-on-week revenue over it. What is still open is whether the room reads as a showroom or an event space, and that is Justin's call inside 30 days.

If nothing is decided, the default continues. Marketing time gets split across three shapes at once, the best insights stay buried in a long document, and 1,000 refillers stays a number on a page.

Why this exists. Christy's reading of the Discovery set: everything in it is equal, so none of it has shape. Clent asked for three things off the back of it: belief, clarity, momentum, because a decision made beats a strategy admired.

North star is Justin's, from his plan on a page. JP framed it in the catch-up as 1,000 systems; refillers is the better measure, since a system not refilling is worth nothing.

BUSINESS

Settle the shape, then the split.

Justin's own 30-day call: a Taproom selling kegs, a Showroom selling beers, or an Event space doing both. Alongside it, clarity on who is buying, residential vs commercial, and where the energy goes.

First step: Justin picks the shape and the residential-vs-commercial split, inside 30 days.

BRAND

Home entertainment, not beer.

Justin's line, every household deserves beer on tap, is the ambition, not the brand idea. The brand idea is that Tap That turns an ordinary catch-up into the best one on the street. The kegerator belongs beside the outdoor kitchen and the high-end barbecue, not beside the bar fridge.

First step: rewrite key messaging for each target market on that basis, inside 30 days, Christy to lead.

SALES AND MARKETING

Switch the owners who already have a system.

Justin's number one priority: find every existing keg system owner and move them onto Tap That refills. Alongside it, the website upgrade plus SEM, and a referral programme with JVPs.

First step: build the outreach list of existing system owners and start the switch.

ACTIVATION

Oktoberfest, then the room as a destination.

A successful Oktoberfest and keg system giveaway first. Then taproom traffic from local business, functions and ticketed music events, the agreed priority for the room, not walk-ins.

First step: deliver Oktoberfest and the giveaway, then book the first ticketed music night.

SEQUENCE

30 DAYS The shape decision, KPIs and growth targets, meeting rhythm agreed.

3 MONTHS Website, GoTab and SEM live; existing owners contacted; next hire decided.

6 MONTHS 250 active keg refillers; a clear career pathway for Chris and Harry.

1 YEAR Referrals and JVPs driving most sales; cashflow positive, Justin on a wage.

3 YEARS 1,000 active keg refillers: Gold Coast, Brisbane, Northern Rivers, residential and commercial.

5 YEARS Rapid expansion: external investment, franchising, and a production facility.

10 YEARS Exit. Justin's own words: "sell the sucker".

This ladder is Justin's, from his plan on a page. JP's proposed sprints on the Activation sheet now sit inside it.

WHO OWNS WHAT

WORKSTREAM	OWNS IT	SUPPORTS
The shape decision	Justin	Chris, Harry, Clent, Christy
Website, GoTab + Fishbowl, SEM	Justin	Jewell Projects
Existing owners and referral programme	Harry	Clent
Taproom, events, Oktoberfest	Chris	Harry
Wholesale and next hire	Justin	Clent
Brand and messaging	Justin	Christy
Engagement lead and weekly check-in	Christy	Clent, Ronnie

A full responsibility matrix sits on the Activation sheet. Justin and Chris return their split of what Jewell owns and what Harry and Justin keep, and it is finalised at the first weekly check-in.

WHAT JUSTIN DECIDES FIRST

■ Taproom, Showroom, or Event space doing both? JP recommended pausing walk-in trade; Justin's own priorities keep the room trading.

■ Residential vs commercial: who is buying, and where does the energy go?

■ What Jewell owns and what Harry and Justin keep, against the scoped costs in the proposal.

■ The next hire: brewer vs wholesale plus bar coverage, hybrid either way.

■ KPIs and growth targets: keg system sales, active keg refillers, wholesale accounts.

■ Weekly check-in, 45 minutes, Christy leading. Ronnie to lock the day; Justin can do Thursday or Friday, earlier in the week preferred.

Justin's own 30-day list, returned 16 September, updated after the 18 September catch-up.

WHERE THE MONEY ACTUALLY IS

The system is the barrier. The refill is the business. Attention has been going to neither.

Systems go out close to cost, and the margin arrives later at roughly $70 gross a keg. That makes this a subscription business wearing a brewery's clothes. A subscription business needs people to stay home and reorder. The Tap Room needs them to come in. Eighteen months of attention went to the half that loses money.

The fix is not optimisation, it is reshaping. Running a brewery and a hospitality venue on a skeleton staff is not a resourcing problem to be solved with more hours.

The direction question moved on 18 September. The taproom is a destination for events and local business, and walk-in trade is not where the energy goes. Justin has been funding the business himself to stay open and wants to be drawing a wage inside 12 months. That is the deadline behind everything on this page.

Per-keg margin and system economics from the Discovery pack. Break-even confirmed by Justin on 18 September. Franchise shape discussed 18 September: Tap That brews centrally, franchisees run a showroom and bar from pallet-delivered kegs. Satellite tasting rooms with a cool room are the low-capital step before that. Chris's caution stands: systemising brewing is harder than a recipe.

THE CLIMB TO 1,000

ACTIVE REFILLERS AT SIX MONTHS

1,000

BY YEAR THREE, GC, BRISBANE, NORTHERN RIVERS

~$50k

BREAK-EVEN PER MONTH. CURRENT RUN RATE $35K TO $45K. BEST MONTH HIT IT

The cheapest growth is still the 116 in the database who bought their system elsewhere. Their objections are overcome. Nobody has to be sold on the idea of beer at home.

Partners move this number, campaigns do not. Harvey Norman, Kegland and Benchy each put Tap That in front of people who have already bought the hardware. Justin's one-year marker is cashflow positive, with JM taking a wage.

Justin confirmed on 18 September that 250 active refillers gets the business past break-even, so the six-month number and the money number are the same number.

The climb to 1,000 is not a marketing target, it is a distribution target. It needs partners, not posts.

DECISIONS REQUIRED

- The three-way shape question. Taproom, showroom or event space. Owner: Justin.
- Residential vs commercial. Where the energy goes.
- The Jewell split. What Jewell owns, what Harry and Justin keep, against the proposal.
- Next hire. Brewer vs wholesale plus bar coverage, hybrid.
- KPIs and growth targets. Keg system sales, active keg refillers, wholesale accounts.
- Settle $2.55. The number on the live ad.
- The 250 date. March 2027 or Christmas 2026.

THE FIVE UNITS, AND THE CALL ON EACH

UNIT	TODAY	THE CALL
Keg systems	Sold near cost	Lease-to-buy. Plus a delivery service, Justin's three-month item
Refills	96–113 active, residential and commercial, no push	Scale. This is the business. 250 by March 2027, 1,000 by year three
Taproom	Walk-ins, local business, functions and events	Destination. Events, functions, ticketed music and local business. Not walk-ins. Showroom or event space is Justin's 30-day call
Wholesale	Approaches come in, nothing converts	Resource. Next hire is brewer vs wholesale plus bar, hybrid
Merchandise	Line five in Justin's plan	Keep it small.

Canning is not in Justin's plan at all. Consistent with the room.

UNIT ECONOMICS, AND THE ARGUMENT

One wholesale account is worth about ten households. That ratio is the whole case for resourcing wholesale ahead of another consumer campaign.

Members leak at 18%, non-members at 44%. Attaching membership to a system sale is the single highest-return retention move available.

$2.55 a schooner at home, 2.5 cases for the price of one. Against $12+ at the pub and $80+ for a case at the bottleshop.

63% of customers said they would host a demo at their own place. That is a distribution channel sitting unused, and it costs nothing but coordination.

Two membership programmes are running against one business. If the room becomes a destination and refills lead, one of them is paying for a shape the business no longer has. Redesign both around the refill, or drop one. Justin lists a taproom membership as a three-month item, so the tension is live.

The open item is no longer which maths, it is making sure the live ad and every piece of collateral carry $2.55.

THE CANNING QUESTION

Christy raised it. Tap That pushed back. It is not in Justin's plan.

For: a bottle shop is where people find out the brand exists, which no keg marketing reaches. It also opens bars and restaurants that will not give up a tap.

Against: low margin, high effort, and it competes directly with the refill model this plan is built on. Tap That has already priced a small line and parked it.

What would settle it: a costed run through the cannery contact next door, priced against Earth Brew at about $36 a four-pack.

Worth revisiting if walk-in trade is wound back and a new awareness channel is needed.

WHAT COULD GO WRONG

- Pausing walk-ins costs community. The room built the ambassadors. Replace it with systems before it goes, not after.
- Wholesale hire without a process. A salesperson with no CRM behind them will fail the same way the founders did.
- Chris is trapped in production. Justin's words: highly valued and intelligent, but the business needs his time and knowledge freed up.
- Everything at once. The recurring failure has been starting things and moving on. Three moves finished beats ten started.

Justin's own point in both catch-ups: as this scales, the personal connection cannot hold. It has to be replicated in systems. The franchise model on the summary sheet only works if it does.

THE POSITION

Your place, the best catch-up on the street. Home entertainment, not beer.

Every household deserves beer on tap is Justin's line and it stays as the ambition. It is not the brand idea. The brand idea is what the product does to an ordinary Saturday: it turns a catch-up into the one people talk about. That puts Tap That in the home entertainment business, beside the outdoor kitchen, the high-end barbecue and the coffee machine, not beside the bar fridge. Same move BMW made from cars to mobility, and it opens the same doors: partners, product and price.

It also settles what Tap That is not. Not a craft brewery competing on taps, not a bottle shop competing on price, and not a venue competing for a Friday night.

Look for what the category does badly, not what it does well. Harvey Norman's outdoor living page leads with kitchens and appliances, and the kegerator is not in the grouping. That is the gap.

Nobody on the Gold Coast owns this category, in market or in search. Christy owns the wording; this is her draft to sign off.

HEROES, NOT A TAIL

About 19 brew choices is costing twice: cost of goods on the tail, and choice paralysis at the point of sale. It also means no single beer gets enough marketing to become known.

Cutting the tail is not the point. The point is putting the freed marketing energy behind the heroes that remain. Romance the beer, not the venue.

Add social proof at the point of sale: most popular, award winning, what to eat with it. Missing in the room and missing on the site.

27 taps and roughly a third not beer is core identity, not clutter. Cut brews, not the breadth of drink types.

DESIGN FOR HER

The single largest unaddressed opportunity in the brand.

The range, the marketing and the hardware all read masculine. Covered is not the same as catered for. Christy's argument is the blunt one: if women are not coming, men will not follow. Justin's target segments, sharehouses, DINKs, young families, baby boomers, high-volume drinkers, cashed-up tradies, are households, and designing for her is how those households say yes.

What it means in practice: romance the RTD properly, build the hydration and light range as a real story, make products she is proud to serve, and design a system she is willing to have in eyesight at home.

And the hardware itself. A Zip HydroTap sells at around $10,000 largely because it looks right on a bench. That is the standard.

Where to start: wellness influencer collaborations, and co-developing something with a local fitness brand. Christy's example was a protein beer. The point is a product she would choose, not a product she tolerates.

This is a product and design brief, not a campaign. It will not be solved by a post.

WHO THE ENEMY IS

Pubs at $12+ a schooner, bottleshops at $80+ a case, and home brew supply stores. Not the duopoly, not A&A, not the keg delivery operators.

Justin's own words: the more people drinking craft beer and not XXXX, the better. Other breweries are not the enemy. Every price conversation should be unit economics: $2.55 a schooner at home against $12+ at the pub, 2.5 cases for the price of one.

Do not get pulled into a keg price war. It is the one fight where winning costs more than losing.

A&A's domain is suspended and they have merged with Burleigh Homebrew. Following a competitor in that state down on price is worse than pointless.

The at-home figure is settled: $2.55 a schooner. Every piece of collateral and the live ad should carry it.

PROOF ALREADY OWNED AND BARELY USED

- Integrated units, already selling. Three to four plumbed-in systems with only the font showing, installed in the last couple of months. Not on the website. This is the product that belongs in the outdoor living grouping.
- Referrals at 18% of sales without a programme worth the name. The proof that the social mechanic works is already in the numbers.
- Crafted Brewers' Choice award. Won, and almost invisible. It belongs on the site, in the room, on the tap decals and in social.
- Fits any system, no CO2 with Talos kegs. Two buying objections answered, both currently below the fold.
- 1,000 giveaway entries and strong reviews. Demand for the hardware is demonstrated, and the reviews are present but unpromoted and invisible to AI search.
- Named brand ambassadors and UGC providers. Kurt, Troy, Mitch, Aden and Ash, Justin's own list, ready to deploy within three months.
- Oktoberfest, with the keg system giveaway. A proof moment in the next 30 days.

IDENTITY HOUSEKEEPING, AND WHAT IS STILL OPEN

- The name on the mark. Documents say Tap That Brewery, the badge says Brewery & Keghouse. Founders' call. Until it is made, never crop the badge.
- Two live membership posters quote different prices. One has to be withdrawn.
- Source files. Vector logos and font names are still outstanding, so the colour and type calls in the guidelines stay provisional.
- 30 days, per Justin, now Christy's. Rewrite key messaging for each target market on the home entertainment position, and get the customer journey mapped.

VOICE, AND THE RULE THAT GOVERNS IT

Green leads, gold accents, never the reverse. Bold condensed caps for headlines, a plain workhorse sans for reading. No scripts, no serifs.

Two registers. Cheeky for names and moments, at exactly the level the trading name sets. Plain and generous for money, service and responsibility. Never crude beyond the name's own wink, never beer-snob, never discount-shouty. Justin's own register, be the envy of your friends, cashed-up tradies, sets the ceiling for how far the cheek goes.

Photography: the real room, real customers, available light. Not stock, and not anything that could not have been taken at Burleigh Heads.

The event flyers already built follow this. They are the reference for anything new.

BEFORE ANYTHING ELSE: CONNECT THE SYSTEM

Nothing talks to anything. Every campaign is set up to underperform before it launches.

META ADS

Working. Driving traffic and foot traffic already.

Needs: somewhere to send the traffic. Justin's 3-month item: a confirmed budget breakdown.

WEBSITE + SEM

A brochure, not a conversion tool. Justin cannot update the shop page; Chris has pushed for a fix for six months and the last rebuild missed its Easter launch on broken integrations.

Jewell's scope: a CMS Justin runs himself, wired to GoTab, Fishbowl, Meta Pixel and the CRM, built to be read by people and by AI search. Platform-agnostic; Shopify if it fits, custom if it integrates better. Acceptance test: integrations proven before launch, not promised.

POS AND INVENTORY

Sales happen here and never reach the customer record.

Justin's 3-month item: transition to GoTab plus Fishbowl, writing back to the CRM.

CRM

Partly built, stalled. Blanket 90-day SMS is the only automation.

Needs: consumption triggers and segments. Justin's 3-month item: a system for re-engaging lapsed keg customers.

ONLINE STORE

Partly built, stalled. Cannot support the offers this plan needs.

Must support at launch: memberships, vouchers, delivery, lease-to-buy systems and the keg delivery service.

This is the first fix. Spending more on ads before it is fixed buys traffic the business cannot catch.

WHO WE ARE TALKING TO, AND WHAT CHANGES

SEGMENT	THE MESSAGE
Residential vs commercial	Justin's 30-day call: where the energy goes
Household segments Sharehouses, DINKs, young families, boomers, high-volume drinkers, tradies	Catching up with friends made easy. $2.55 a schooner
Owns a system, bought elsewhere 56% of refill customers	You already have the hardware. We are the beer. First keg on us
Lapsed, forgot	Consumption-triggered reminder, free delivery, one tap to reorder
Lapsed, cutting back	Low, non-alcoholic, low-carb. A healthier option, not less beer
Never owned a system	Cost per schooner against the pub. No CO2. Try it at a party first
Venues and clubs	Margin, exclusivity, club-branded kegs, season guarantees

THE TWO HIGHEST-RETURN MOVES

01 · Convert the owners who are already sold.

Justin's priority one, with a 3-month item: a strategy to transition every existing keg system owner onto Tap That refills. Voucher tied to Harvey Norman sales, the Kegland and corny keg databases, and Benchy. Bunnings-installer model: they sell hardware, we are named first call.

02 · Take the friction out of reordering.

Free delivery and consumption-triggered reminders replace the 90-day SMS. Justin's launch items: lease-to-buy systems and a keg delivery service.

03 · Split the lapsed list in two.

Some are cutting back, needing the low and non-alcoholic range; some just forgot, needing one tap to reorder. The split is not established. Justin's 3-month item: a re-engagement system for lapsed customers.

04 · Referrals, JVPs and online drive system sales.

Referrals are already 18% of sales on a programme nobody can hold in their hand. Today: 1,000 tap tokens (about $50, half a keg) for referring a system or wholesale buyer, 500 for a refill customer. Christy's call: tokens do not travel; a free keg does. Rebuild it as a free keg, a card with a QR code the owner can hand to a mate, and a home tasting where an owner hosts and earns on what sells. Tradies who install kitchens and plumb systems get the same card. Justin's three-month items stay: referral programme and Bring a Mate live, JVP list built, ambassador content ready.

JP holds Harvey Norman franchisee contacts, plus a contact with 20,000-plus installs across Harvey Norman, JB Hi-Fi and Good Guys.

WHOLESALE AS A FUNCTION

Bars have approached Tap That and it still has not converted. That is not a demand problem, it is the absence of follow-up and sales experience. Justin's priority five, with a 3-month item: outreach to event venues and niched venues.

Stand it up properly: a full-timer or a commissioned agent, targets and KPIs, a pipeline in the CRM rather than in someone's head. The room put it at about twelve touch points before a venue buys beer, and Tap That has the first one and almost none of the eleven after it. The next hire is undecided between a brewer and wholesale plus bar coverage, hybrid either way.

Then go after the shape of it: custom systems for sporting clubs, club-branded kegs, minimum guarantees per season, and moving rigs from footy to cricket so they earn year-round.

And work around the duopoly. Lock-in is not satisfaction, and venues are already forming buying groups to get around it.

One account is worth about ten households. This is where the return is.

FOUND BY PEOPLE, AND BY MACHINES

Within six to twelve months a large share of web traffic will expect an answer from AI search rather than a list of links. The site has to be readable by both.

The basics that are missing: a real About page, an FAQ that answers the buying objections, reviews on the site, and the awards page the Crafted win deserves. Justin's tech item, SEM, runs alongside these GEO basics, not instead of them.

Reviews are the cheapest asset here. They exist, they are strong, and they sit on platforms rather than on the site where a model can read them.

Then the category play: nobody owns beer at home on the Gold Coast in search. Owning it is cheaper now than it will ever be again.

JUSTIN'S LADDER : his own horizons, dated from 16 September

30 DAYS · TO MID-OCTOBER

- Shape decision: showroom or event space. Walk-ins are not the strategy
- Customer journey mapped, key messaging confirmed
- KPIs, growth targets and meeting rhythm set
- Residential vs commercial, external support vs in-house
- Brand ambassadors named: Kurt, Troy, Mitch, Aden, Ash
- Oktoberfest and the keg system giveaway
- Jewell proposal and scoped costs reviewed; Jewell split decided

3 MONTHS · TO MID-DECEMBER

- Website upgrade, SEM, GoTab and Fishbowl transition
- Lease-to-buy keg systems and delivery service
- JVPs, referral partners; referral programme, Bring a Mate
- Existing-owner switch strategy, lapsed re-engagement system
- Taproom: local business, events, membership
- Wholesale outreach; next hire decided
- Referral programme rebuilt: free keg, QR card, home tastings

6 MONTHS · TO MARCH 2027

- 250 active keg refillers reached
- Career pathways defined for Chris and Harry
- Or 250 by Christmas, if that date is chosen

1 YEAR · TO SEPTEMBER 2027

- Referrals, JVPs and online driving most system sales
- Replicable events and promotions calendar in place
- Cashflow positive, JM on a wage

Longer horizons, 1,000 refillers and proprietary system supply at three years, expansion, franchising and a production facility at five years, exit at ten to twelve, sit on the summary sheet. Clent is overseas from 30 September; Christy carries the weekly check-in.

THE DESTINATION PROGRAMME

The room already makes money on events. This is about selling them deliberately.

Tours. Get onto the circuit. The bus parking is an asset, not a liability. Build the Urban Legends booking widget so operators stop coordinating venue by venue.

Weddings and functions. PR to tourism operators, event and wedding planners. The signature wedding brew turns one booking into reception volume and a take-home sample.

Local business and ticketed music. Justin's own taproom priorities: lunch and after-work trade from local business, and ticketed music events, not pausing walk-ins.

Competitions, two a year. Each keg system giveaway moves about 30 systems. Justin's call is two a year, not three. The insider offer now lands the moment someone enters, and the Crafted Festival funnel (free taste and paddle, entry, automation) is the template to repeat.

Party rental is the quiet one. A system in a house for a weekend is a demo the host runs for you, in front of the people who might buy one.

PARTNERSHIPS TO OPEN

WHO	THE PLAY	LEAD
Harvey Norman	GWP or first keg free at point of sale, the buyer database, and the kegerator into the outdoor living grouping	Clent
Kegland / corny keg	Buy the owner databases	Tap That
Benchy	Official partnership and database	Tap That
Mark's venues	About 300 weddings a year across two venues	Clent
Zip water contacts	About 1,000 distribution points	Clent
Value H2O	About 10,000 SME water-cooler sites on the east coast, 10 techs already in the field. Techs introduce the system on a service visit	Clent
Outdoor kitchen makers	A keg-in-fridge tap unit as a standard inclusion. Visuals first, test demand on social, then talk manufacturing	Christy
Jim's Mowing	Backyard presence. Referral card in the van	Clent
Trades and installers	Plumbers and kitchen fitters as a referral force: card or QR, plus a kickback	Harry
Cannery contact	Parked. Canning is not in Justin's plan	Clent
JVPs and referral partners	List built, outreach started within three months	Harry
Brand ambassadors	Kurt, Troy, Mitch, Aden, Ash. UGC content ready to deploy	Harry Named in the catch-ups, the 17 September prep and Justin's plan. The ambassadors are Justin's list.

ARTWORK, ALREADY BUILT

Four A4 event flyers are print-ready in Tap That's own format: weddings, bucks and hens, work functions, tours and tastings. Copy is a first pass and expects an edit.

Two image sets exist. One on commissioned concept photography, one on August site-visit photography. The concept set looks better and is right for a pitch. Anything going out as real venue marketing runs the venue set, or the four frames get shot properly.

What is still needed: a wording pass from Christy, the per-schooner figure settled before any price goes on a flyer, and a decision on whether these print or stay digital. Next pieces: UGC and brand ambassador content, and Oktoberfest artwork.

Tap That's guidelines rule out anything that could not have been taken at Burleigh Heads. That is the test.

CHECKPOINTS

- Thu 17 Sept. Justin's commitments back. Done.
- Fri 18 Sept. Catch-up held. Priorities agreed, Christy leads, weekly rhythm agreed. Done.
- w/c 28 Sept. Jewell returns the full package: this pack at v03 plus proposal with scoped costs. Confirm with Justin whether it lands before or after Oktoberfest on Thu 1 Oct.
- First weekly check-in. Jewell split confirmed, RACI finalised, 250 date chosen.
- Mid-October. 30-day list closed, including meeting rhythm and agenda. Oktoberfest run.
- Mid-December. Three-month list closed. Tech live, lease-to-buy launched.
- March 2027. 250 active refillers.
- September 2027. Cashflow positive, JM on a wage.

Every review asks first whether active refillers moved.
